Helpful information about preparing professional quality posters is available from these sources

- An article by Jane Miller has useful tips, "Preparing and Presenting Effective Research Posters," at <http://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/articles/PMC1955747/>
 - One principle that you may wish to follow, discussed in the article by Miller, is breaking the arrangement into vertical sections that allow viewers "to read each section standing in one place while following the conventions of reading left-to-right and top-to-bottom." The first display link on the American Population Association page [see next entry] illustrates this principle.
- The Population Association of America posts award winning poster displays. For the names of the 2016 poster session winners: <http://www.populationassociation.org/2016/04/19/paa2016-poster-session-winners-2/>
 - You can look up individual winning participants to view the abstract. Many authors post their full paper or can be contacted directly: <http://www.populationassociation.org/wp-content/uploads/PAA-2016-POSTER-SESSION-WINNERS.pdf>
- AERA guidelines for poster displays can be found at: <http://www.aera.net/EventsMeetings/AnnualMeeting/PresenterandParticipantInformation/tabid/15826/Default.aspx>
 - Please note, that the small exemplar at the top right of this page does not conform to the vertical organization principle discussed above.
